This careful grading system allows scholars to understand the reliability of each hadith, preventing the spread of potentially spurious traditions. The use of specific terms like sahih isn't merely a label but a result of a detailed analysis of the isnad, considering factors such as the narrators' memory, trustworthiness, and potential biases. Understanding this methodology is crucial for anyone engaging with At-Tirmidhi's work. For instance, identifying a hadith as ghareeb doesn't necessarily imply weakness; it signifies a unique transmission path, requiring further scrutiny.
